Over 85 percent of individuals facing cancer encounter the non-medical repercussions of the disease and its treatments, including fear, anxiety, pain, isolation, financial concerns, and guilt. The Wellspring Chinguacousy cancer support center offers professionally led programs and services, empowering thousands to actively manage their cancer journey and enhance their overall quality of life. At Wellspring, the emphasis is on the individual, not just the illness. Operating without core government funding, Wellspring depends on donations from individuals, foundations, and corporations to sustain its commitment to offering programs entirely free of charge.
